Physics Class Tests Design and Building Skills

The Mr. Holbrook's Physics students had an experiment about momentum, impulse, and collisions. The objective was to design, build, test and evaluate a landing pad or "safety device" to protect an egg during a collision with a hard surface. The students had to apply the laws of physics to see how to reduce damage to both cars and passengers by designing their own "air-bag". During this activity, they had to design, build, test, and evaluate a "collision safety device" (in the form of a landing pad) to protect an egg. The egg was not protected in any way and was tested from increasing heights.

Students named and decorated their eggs before testing them. See more eggs on pages 3 & 4.
